
Woolston Spitfire Trail
The Supermarine company was founded here, on the banks of the River Itchen, in 1913. By 1940, production of the iconic Spitfire, vital to Britain's survival in WWII, was in full swing. But on 24th and 26th September, the factories were bombed with great loss of life among the workers and local people. Manufacture stopped but was dispersed to over 30 secret sites across the town and many more beyond.
Follow the trail, find the blue Spitfire Makers plaques and discover more about Southampton's Spitfire story.
